

9 East Putney Brook Stone Arch Bridge

River Road, Putney, Vermont

In a time when iron and steel had displaced wood and stone in bridge construction, Vermont-native farmer, engineer and mason, James Otis Follett, created a stone arch bridge in 1902 to carry a town highway across East Putney Brook. While a diverted roadway has terminated its use, it's worth a trip on the trail less traveled to discover this hidden gem.

